One of the Most Popular Roses of All Time Postal Service Dedicates New Stamp Featuring Peace Rose

SHREVEPORT, LA — The U.S. Postal Service celebrates the peace rose today with the release of the Peace Rose Forever stamp. The stamp, which features the beautiful garden rose that revolutionized hybrid tea roses, was dedicated at the Gardens of the American Rose Center.

“The U.S. Postal Service has a long tradition of showcasing flowers and floral artwork on stamps,” said Postal Service Learning and Development Director Susan McKeen, who dedicated the stamp. “The Peace Rose Forever stamp serves as a sterling example of this tradition and so deserving of its own place on a U.S. postage stamp as one of the most popular roses of all time.”

Joining McKeen to unveil the stamp were Patricia Shanley, president, American Rose Society; Sonia Meilland-Guibert, Research and Development, House of Meilland-Meilland International and granddaughter of Francis Meilland, who created the Peace Rose in 1945; Bob Martin, vice president, American Rose Society; Laura Seabaugh, executive director, American Rose Society; and Bradd Yoder, president, Star Roses and Plants.

The Peace Rose Forever stamp art features a detail of a photograph of the rose’s blossom, its creamy yellow petals touched by pink at the edges. Art director Ethel Kessler designed the stamp with an existing photograph by Richard C. Baer. Share news of the stamps using the hashtags #PeaceRoseStamp and #FlowerStamps.

Customers may purchase the Peace Rose Forever stamp at The Postal Store at usps.com/shop, by calling 800-STAMP-24 (800-782-6724) and at Post Office facilities nationwide. A variety of stamps and collectibles also are available at ebay.com/stamps.
